She was taken be-fore Justice Thompson for trial, when it was shown by the evidence that she was employed in the house as a servant; and on Thursday it was discovered that some one had stelen a merino dress, a woollen shawl, a black velvet bon et a white muslin collar and a white cotton skirt from Miss Catharine Dickson. A portion of the goods were found upon the prisoner and Justice Thompson committed her to jail for trial at court, and recognized her as a little girl he had once before sent to court upon a similar charge, of which she was acquitted by the jury. MR. EDITOR: In your edition of the 14th inst. I saw the following :- " James Juneman, (my name is George Jueneman,) keeper of a saloon corner 4th and D streets, was fined $52 for selling on Sunday by Justice Ferguson. A lot of Government property was found on the premises of Juneman, which was turned over to the property sergeant." The first offence is true, (selling on Sunday,) but the second charge you have made in regard to Government property being found on my premises is altogether an error. Ne one has searched my house yet. I never had a red cent's worth of Government property in my house, and never will. I am well acquainted in this city, and a story like that might seriously injure me. Please be kind enough to do me the simp'e justice to state that it was a mistake to charge me with having Government property on my premises.
